Electro-ambient, psycho-acoustic, trip hop, techno-dub 11 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Ambient, ELECTRONIC: Trip Hop Details: Mortal Engines is the electro-ambient dub project of Don Avera. Don has been recording/releasing music since the early 90s first, as a member of Cyclops Joint (Compilations: Manifestation VOL 3-1992, Bureaucracy of Hope: Elephants Force Fed on Stale Chalk....1992), later as Mortal Engines (Compilations: Precipitation-1995, Amphibious Maximus-1995, A Storm of Drones-Asphodel, 1996). The years spent between now then have been filled with parenting making basement home tapes. Static Blue is the culmination of some of those tapes. Late in 2002, a computer was bought much analog to digital transfer occurred. Don, was also getting a lot of tracks (rough ideas full songs) from Brian Horst (AKA: Thaddeus Koohoeven of Noisettes' fame) through the mail. This was a prime opportunity to start learning about the vast editing opportunities that a computer could offer: Thus the birth of Static Blue. Initially, tracks were chosen randomly auditioned for potential. If there was even a small kernel of an idea, it would be extracted put to use. Many full songs of either Don's or Brian's were often either laid down as a whole processed with additional sequencing (ie. Electrokelp, Kumul), or chopped up beyond all recognition to formulate a brand new idea (ie Tektonic, Audio Rorschach Test). The only rule at work was to keep the idea interesting the process fun with the approach to each song differing from the previous.
