Chloe Marin was lucky. She was a teenager when a party turned into a killing spree, and she was one of the few to survive. Chloe's sketch of one of the killers linked two dead cult members to the massacre, closing the case. Ten years later Chloe is a psychologist specializing in helping traumatized victims. A model's disappearance ranks low on the cops' priority list but Chloe suspects a killer's using a modeling agency to stalk his prey. When the model's ghost appears to Chloe, she knows that she has to help. So does Luke Cane, a British cop-turned-P.I. Chloe and Luke don't trust each other but they can't help their strong attraction. Luckily they agree that someone needs to find those missing girls, even if a few laws have to get bent. When Chloe is late for an appointment at the agency, she finds a mass murder eerily similar to the one she witnessed. She hadn't been convinced the police found the real killers, and now she's sure of it--and terrified she won't cheat death again.
