An exciting concept album which traces the journey of the Inverse Gravity Vehicle 'Explorer' on its inaugural mission to go beyond the limits of our solar system. The music is an ambient soundscape with elements of dance, techno and jazz. 10 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Ambient, ELECTRONIC: Soundscapes Details: This album is dedicated to my uncle - Professor John Searl - the Father of Modern Antigravity. Many years ago he invented a machine which gives free energy and can also be used to make a fantastic space craft called the Inverse Gravity Vehicle. There is a lot of information relating to John Searl on the internet. Do a search and you will see thousands of articles and links relating to him and his work. I am one of very few living witnesses to his craft actually flying in Warminster UK during the late '60's. These craft do work. Interested parties should buy this album to help fund John Searl's work. All profits from sales will be given to support further funding of this great mission. If you run a big business or are a millionaire please let me know if you want to give John Searl a lot of money to get this project completed and to transform space travel as we know it. The album Disc to Infinity is an ambient spacescape which describes the imagined journey of John Searl during the inaugural flight of his IGV named 'Explorer' as it travels beyond our solar system and into the 8th dimension where John meets a babe called Erin at a disco on an 8th dimensional version of the planet Venus before eventually finding his way back home. Its a beautifully atmospheric concept album and worth every penny. So please buy it and help a true eccentric British inventor genius ! Thanx.
