Independently owning the record label Gotit Inc. With drum kicks like Lil Jon and bass lines like Dr. Dre, with exquisite melodies. His style has matured into a sound like no other. It all started in 1993 when Bonelark first wrote his first rap ever. Being influenced by the late great Tupac, he pursued the rap game, giving up dope sales in the rough streets of Oakland to pursue his music career. Appearing on numerous underground albums that were never released. Ending up frustrated by the rap game not being beneficial financially, also with the pressure of being a father, like every dope dealer in the world the street were calling him back. He ended up hustling for years on and after losing close homies in the game and going through a lot of misfortunes he decided to get out of the dope game for good. Returning to the music industry seeing that his nephew Young Monster had a lot of potential Bonelark decided to start being the man behind the music. So he decided to get his own studio and make the music happen. After six months of messing around with it not knowing anything about reasons or pro tools he fell in love with making beats and that is where he is at now. He has created a sound of his own without any hand outs. There is no limit where this focused man is going, because of his dedication and determination.
