Warm, melodic jazz highlighting inventive electric guitar and brilliant Fender Rhodes on an eclectic selection of tunes. 11 MP3 Songs JAZZ: Traditional Jazz Combo, BLUES: Jazzy Blues Details: About the CD: It only took five decades, but Joe Jewell has finally released his first CD! The Quartet worked together for two years refining their style and repertoire and were finally ready in 2006 to commit to a recording. By then the music had become sophisticated, cool, fun, and memorable. The sound is unique, capitalizing on the sonic palette created by the electric fretless bass and masterfully played Fender Rhodes. The drumming and percussion provide a solid but creative underpinning for Joe Jewell's always melodic guitar. The grooves and the stellar Rhodes playing might remind you of the great CTI recordings of the 1970's. Part of the beauty of this CD comes from the eclectic repertoire, which ranges from straight-ahead jazz to R&B to classical guitar; familiar tunes intermixed with many surprises. This is serious jazz but melodic and listenable at the same time. Brilliantly recorded and mixed, it sounds like you are at an intimate concert! Equally adept on classical and electric guitar, Joe can be found performing as a featured jazz soloist at the State University of New York Jazz Guitar Festival the week after performing the avant-garde concert music of Chinese Composer Tan Dun at the La Jolla Chamber Music Festival.
