His love of music was fostered in his homeland Bermuda giving him, what he calls a spiritual connection to his music. Blackwolff left Bermuda at the age of 25 and was able to put his long-time love of music to good use. Blackwolff composed, and produced all his songs and writes about songs that mean something to you personally, but can also be very uplifting and positive. That's completely obvious when you here Blackwolff first debut album "Against All Odds". This mixes up hip-hop with a splash of reggae and some R&B dance grooves to create an album that effectively communicates faith with real life testimonies and observations. Blackwolff aka Neil Fox has managed to combine songs that say something with grooves that are sunny and with the variety of remixes on the project covering all musical bases. "I Need To Find A Piece Of Mind" maps out a scenario of escaping jail and finding God. "Now I Lay Down To Sleep" is about living in peace even when family situations are far from easy. Blackwolff isn't afraid to tackle difficult subjects with tough language and a message of hope. Highlights include the Latin vibe of "Are You Still Down For Me" and the three versions of "I Was Living Dangerous" which include a cameo from Shyloks which adds extra vibe. It's a successful mix of styles that Blackwolff has made his own. Blackwolff runs on energy fuel that burns full-throttle ignited by the heat of his soulful voice and the power and passion of his performance. Stay tuned for Blackwolff's new Reggae album "Songs Of Freedom" to be released late in 2005. I am today's Voice In the desert who provokes the WORD that no man can ignore.
