She has a quirky stage presence that allows her to win over any crowd through her witty commentary and stories. "Arlene McCann put on a great show at La Salle. Her musical styling offers a great mixture of something familiar and something new. Speaking as one who had first heard Arlene perform two years ago, her voice keeps on getting stronger, and her writing is ever-evolving. Said Steve Scaduto, coordinator for Late Night La Salle University at La Salle University in Philadelphia, Pa. The intimacy of her performance makes one feel you are listening to private conversations between Arlene and the humanized version of her guitar ... We will definitely have Arlene back. Though McCanns style is folky, with hints of rock and roll, she usually performs alone, accompanied only by her guitar but isnt opposed to collaborating with special guests. Her inspirations and influences include Ani Difranco, Dar Williams, Dan Bern, Melissa Ferrick, the Indigo Girls, Sheryl Crow, Eminem, Hammel on Trial, Doug Norrie, Ryan Adams, Counting Crows, Tegan and Sara, to name a few. She attends live shows when an interesting artist comes her way and is open to new music and is forever trying new ways to create a new sound in her own song writing. I felt happy and relaxed sitting there just listening to the show, shes not at all what people expect. Arlenes a good mix of Ani Difranco, Dar Williams, and the Indigo Girls all thrown into one person, said Meg Panichelli, president of West Chester University of Pennsylvanias Lesbian Gay Bisexual and Transgender Association. McCann has been writing songs for as long as she can remember but didnt pick up a guitar until her senior year in high school. However, she didnt seriously start performing her music until roughly two years later and has yet to stop playing. With the world changing around her each day, she is excited about the future and is willing to roll with anything that comes her way. Since music is her passion, McCann will be playing guitar, singing and writing songs for the rest of her life. Not only does she write her own lyrics and play guitar, she also appreciates the hard work that goes into preparing an album and enjoys getting hands-on by illustrating the artwork for her albums.
