Helped in no small way by the excellent vocals of Jo Brown and Scott Hendry, and utilising many independent musicians in the recording of their two studio Albums. Divided Minds, their second album has now been mastered and the band are starting rehearsals soon for the live show - 2006 is seen as an important year for the crossover of the band from studio to stage, and an exciting time to get to know Bluebook. Bluebook was originally formed in 1998, by Matt, Andre and Paul Willard in a small cold flat in Polegate, East Sussex. The trio shared a passion for electronic music that could be pulled off in a live context as they were all musicians used to playing out and didnt want the great opportunities of technology to limit the possibilities of live performance. They worked with several musicians such as Phil Flack(drums), Vikki van Heerden (vocals) and other assorted guitarists and djs until they finished the first Bluebook studio album which remains unreleased and largely un-heard, although one track 'Rolling Over' was signed by Industry Records and subsequently remixed by Calibre and played numerous times on Radio 1. After several great live shows supporting the likes of Transglobal Underground and Skint Records (Brighton), the band split from the other members of the live act, and the trio went back to the studio. Several years later after completing several library albums of Drum and bass and Trip Hop tunes for Llibrary Music company Digital Vision(London) and honing their studio skills making Sample CDs for Loopmasters (loopmasters.com), the boys have got back on the case, and now over a year after they started, Divided Minds the latest album featuring close work with Jo and Scott on vocals is ready for launch, and the band are just getting the live show ready and sending out Cds to labels, radio stations and promoters.
