Christine Palofox SHIP OF SOUND January 2006 Doug Adamz Airship, Dreamship Ship of Sound, That fateful day when the heroes rode by the farm they came with thundering drums, and cymbals, hurdy gurdy, and tambourine. Their airborne steeds were music itself, and in their arms they carried not swords or clubs or guns. No, their Excalibur sported strings and could hum a chord that would shake the world. Airship, Dreamship, Ship of Sound. The women were mythical angels, divas, clairvoyant, clear voiced, who sang hosanna to the highest, keening clearly, who were wiser than kings or presidents, who, for one mad moment, muzzled the maws of war dogs with a scrap of poetry and a strummed guitar. Airship, Dreamship, Ship of Sound. Like legions of pied piper children , wide eyed, we followed, through dazzling skyways, deadly dark valleys, junk mans alleys, dragging feet through sucking mud, heads spinning galaxies, ferris wheel cliff hangers, perilous rambles, miraculous rescues, melted into utter exhaustion, hollow of hope, ground down, lost and found, til you find it there in your arms again; the voluptuous wooden box held to heart, the plucked strings blur, light twinkles in shadowy corners, harmony is heard in the heartbeat of a stone and the order of the universe is palpable again, ushered by wordless prayer from the guitar. Airship, Dreamship, Ship of Sound. People who are interested in Leo Kottke John Fahey Alex de Grassi should consider this download.
