Balance body, mind and spirit in one ride. You can play it while you jog or exercise. But not necessarily. It is refreshing for people who are already motivated, optimistic, adventurous. And it is uplifting and helpful for people who feel weighed down and who want to raise their self-esteem, boost their creativity or reaffirm their trust. The best antidote for depression is the expression of joy. Several tracks of this album (particularly tracks 1, 5 and 10) are designed to motivate you to find that joy, that cheerfulness. The best antidote for boredom or frustration is experiencing the fascination of variety. Several tracks of this album and the sequence of its 10 songs are designed to help you experience this. To fully appreciate the contents of this album and the sequence of the songs, you may go to musicbrito and LISTEN TO MUSIC SAMPLES OF ALL THE TEN SONGS of this album. You will hear swing-jazzy-tunes in pieces like "Trust" and "Cheerfulness" (which has a spark of rag time). The second piece, "Rising Sun" is a North Asian-New Age-style melody. "Trovadour" (with guitar, winds and piano), "Parental Love" (piano, winds and Shakuhachi, accordion, harp and guitar) and "Visualization" (which features piano, winds, trumpet, harpsichord, organ, a bit of oriental drums and bossanova) are inspirational in very different ways. "Traveling by Road" has a bit of pop, with bossanova rhythm in the middle and the second part. "Bagpipes in the Universe" combines the folk sounds of bagpipes with space music. "The Space Clock" has a more classical touch with piano and winds in a slow marching tone and guitar with bossa nova in the second part. "Fortune" has piano with some oriental effects (Chinese-style sounds and melodics), carrousel-like sounds, new age vocals, winds and cello. Cheerfulness, the last song, will bring out the joy and happiness of your inner child. Enjoy this inspirational and motivational journey...
