Details: Growing up in rural Saskatchewan to a musical family, Kate Steele was exposed to as much jazz and classical as she was country. She played her first notes on the piano at around four, and from there was inspired by her piano-teaching grandmother to pursue the instrument. She started singing at around ten, and spent years harmonizing in choirs and exploring her range. She received a guitar for her thirteenth birthday and there discovered the thrill of singing and playing at the same time. Through her early, incessant exposure to her fathers favourites-- Bob Dylan, Joni Mitchell, Neil Young, Bruce Springsteen-- she developed an appreciation of the power of poems and stories set to music. Her first album Curve of the Earth features songs inspired by her experiences up to now, at home in Canada and abroad. "Kate's new record is a beautiful mix of Margo Timmins-esque vocals and barefoot, rootsy imagery." -- Leeroy Stagger
