Whether backed by his full band at venues like The Bowery Ballroom or in the more intimate and obscure acoustic settings that he has been known to frequent, it is at live shows that Rogers' voice, personality and music truly shines: "With Benji Rogers' stirring and soulful voice and driving guitar hooks, which the Black Crowes would be proud of, Marwood draw you into a world of lush harmonies and compelling rhythms. I defy you not to be singing along at the top of your voice by the second hearing!!" (Jeff Collins, The BBC) With origins tracing back to London but currently based in New York City's Lower East Side, Marwood has shared the bill with the likes of Antigone Rising, Gavin DeGraw, and Rooney, and performed at hundreds of venues across the US and Europe. A diverse band which defies audience pigeonholing, Marwood is as equally thrilled to be invited to perform at the esteemed Hammerstein Ballroom for the iGames Expo 2005 as they are to play in front of eager hipster crowds at NYC's Bowery Ballroom, The Mercury Lounge or The Knitting Factory.
