Garrett Rashley, the Viscount of Finchstonbury, has six months to complete the terms of his late uncle's will to inherit Finchston Park. He has to marry Miriah Carrington. Miriah is delighted, for this is the man she truly loves. But she soon realizes that he didn't marry her because he loved her but because he needed her to gain the inheritance. All of her attempts to break through his defenses fail miserably. For Garrett has built his life around personal freedom, and he only trusts in himself, not in others; and certainly not in God. Until Miriah is injured in a carriage accident. Then the Viscount must take a 'journey' of faith through a dark valley of his own doubts and fears. Can he have fallen in love with his own wife? This wonderfully unique novel combines Regency writing with inspirational romance. You will love the talkative and innocent Miriah and the distant, brooding Garrett.
