flapping, Flapping was (and is) a band featuring Glen (Toad the Wet Sprocket) Phillips, Bruce (Wasted Tape) Winter, and Joe Woodard and Tom Lackner (from Headless Household), gathering energies to create rock-pop-folk-funk-Liverpudlian thing, alternative 11 MP3 Songs in this album (44:45) ! Related styles: POP: Beatles-pop, ROCK: Experimental Rock People who are interested in The Beatles XTC Gomez should consider this download. Details: On extra-pop group flapping, Flappings Montgomery Streetits second CD--the personnel included guitarist-vocalist Glen Phillips (Toad the Wet Sprocket), bassist-vocalist Bruce Winter (Wasted Tape), guitarist-vocalist Joe Woodard and drummer-non-vocalist Tom Lackner (both are also in Headless Household and Dudley). Its a succulent eclectic porridge, ready to consume, a rock-pop-folk-funk-Liverpudlian thing, alternative with a lower case a. Phillips gets down, funkily, on his tunes Positively Double Negative and Eye Wannabe Likes Lye, swirls around the pop wordplayful maze of Sort This Out, and belts out the quirky rave-up, Doubly Doubting Thomas, an anthem for skeptics and/or journalists. Winter courts weird, haunting beauty on his song, The Frogs Are Alive and the oblique ballad Lazy Susan, and gets deceptively rock-ish on Back to the Station. When not adding to the guitaruckus, Woodard swoons with envy about My Favorite Guitar and ponders materialism on the closing mini-epic, Without. Beneath and around it all, Lackner takes left turns towards inner logic on the drums.
