Cow-Punk, Country Punk, and Rock n Roll 16 MP3 Songs COUNTRY: Country Rock, ROCK: Punk

Details: The Rubberneckers are a Cow-Punk band hailing from Humboldt County in Californias wild north. We were formed in the summer of 2002, and weve been honing our chops on stages in local dive bars ever since. We blend country rhythms with up-beat tempos to create our own foot stomping brand of rock-n-roll. The lyrics tell stories everyone is familiar with: heartbreak, loneliness, drug abuse, and late nights of beer and whiskey fueled mayhem. The Farmhouse is our live-in practice space and recording studio as well as the name weve used to stamp our brand on the CDs weve released. Its a turn of the century house on an old dairy farm in rural Blue Lake, CA. The Farmhouse has welcomed and housed touring bands from all over the country, and continues to be the epicenter of our work. She Burnt Beer Creek, released in August of 2003, was our first attempt at utilizing our independent recording studio. Only one hundred copies were released locally. This is the Whiskey Rebellion, released in October of 2004, is our first full-length CD. It was recorded, engineered, and produced at The Farmhouse studio. Half of The Whiskey Rebellion is electric and the other half acoustic in order to showcase the fact that we can play it all either way. Live From The Farmhouse on the KHUM Back Porch Show, released in May of 2006, was recorded and broadcast entirely live on KHUM 104.3. Its our second full-length release. All of the songs are acoustic versions of our normally loud and fast cow-punk tunes. Since its release in October of 2004 This is the Whiskey Rebellion has been picked up and played by local stations KHUM, KHSU, and the tracks Drunk By Four, Ill Buy, and Radio Stations have done stinks in heavy rotation on KSLG 94.1. Live From The Farmhouse has already spent a great deal of its short life in heavy rotation on KHUM. The Rubberneckers are an ensemble cast, and we all share credit for not only songwriting, but recording and engineering as well. We are: Clay Smith: Lead Vocals Rhythm Guitar Greg Lojko: Lead
