POP: Power Pop, ROCK: Modern Rock Details: Silent Film hardly lives up to their name. Presenting a self-described "crazy" performance, the five-piece rock band from Baltimore is anything but quiet. Packaging a sound that can be likened to Thrice, Jimmy Eat World, and Taking Back Sunday, Silent Film relies on pure rock and honest lyrics to convey a unique sound of their own. Since forming in the early 2000's the group has recorded three albums. City is My Sea was released in 2004, and was followed a year later by Our New Heaven which quickly sold out after its original pressing, forcing the band to re-record and re-master for a second release. Following up the smashing success of their sophomore album, Silent Film released The Scene is Dead to hundreds of fans across the Mid Atlantic region in Baltimore, MD. Mastered by Grammy nominated Michael Fossenkemper, this is by far, their most prolific work yet. This concept album depicts current events seen through the eyes of the 20 somethings going through life. As evidence of hard work on stage and in the studio, Silent Film has topped the unsigned band charts on sites such as Purevolume and MySpace on many occasions, garnering hundreds and sometimes thousands of plays and profile visits a day. If that weren't enough, the band has shared the stage with national acts such as Third Eye Blind, Vertical Horizon, Motion City Soundtrack, The Starting Line, and Relient K. With multiple appearances on mainstream rock radio, Silent Film is poised to break out onto the national scene. This year brought the band a new CD, new shows, and new fans. To cap off a tremendous year, Silent Film is currently planning a fall tour to promote The Scene is Dead, bringing their rock coast to coast.
