----- 2003 proved itself to be an incredibly successful year for independant rock/electronica artist Skye Marsden. "Supergirl" rocked European radio, and both "Supergirl" and "Stalker" will be featured in an Alias-like action film, "Lethal", due out in Jan. 2005. Nicknamed "Sky" after talkin' big then wipin' hard on a snowboarding jump, this "angelic vixen" is an energetic, if chaotic addition to the music world. A native Detroiter, Skye grew up with an innate love of the performing arts. At the age of seven, she began playing cello, and by thirteen was performing legitimately on stage. Ultimately, Skye moved to the East Village in New York, and finally to Los Angeles. Los Angeles proved itself to be a creative stimulant. One music pro tried to shove old disco songs on her, and another stared at her chest during an entire interview, inspiring her to write and record a 5 song EP about being a strong, independent girl in today's world. She has numerous times been compared to Shirley Manson, Gwen Stefani, and Pink with a splash of Madonna. "Pieces of Skye" is that five-song CD written by Skye and Paul Bushnell. "The first time Paul and I met, we immediately started writing a song in his living room. It was awesome. We just clicked right away." Paul, being the accomplished and funky-assed bass player (Ja Rule, Shakira, Elton John, BBMak, New Radicals, Joe Cocker, Sinead O'Connor, Edna Swap, The Commitments) that he is, had just the vibe that Skye was looking for. Together they infused her strong, sexy vocals and life-inspired lyrics with pop, funk, punk, and rock, resulting in vibey, danceable grooves with grit.
