A compilation of artists based in and around Vancouver, focusing on vocal lead electronica songs, with a handful of more organic productions, taking you on an emotional journey though a sometimes bleak but always beautiful emotional soundscape. 12 MP3 Songs in this album (46:27) ! Related styles:

ELECTRONIC: Electronica, ELECTRONIC: Folktronic People who are interested in Portishead Goldfrapp Elbow should consider this download. Details: The Earth Tremors Beneath Our Feet is a collection of twelve beautiful songs showcasing nine artists from Vancouver and its surrounding areas. The focus is on introspective, vocal lead electronica, with notable exceptions being Vancouver Islands Kemal Evans intimate acoustic Undone, the powerfully emotive How Deep Is The Water by Carmen and Camille, and the rootsy Delivered by Aaron Nazrul, which also features vocals by Frazey Ford from The Be Good Tanyas. On the electronica side, the album debuts two songs from new band A Promise. Their haunting Ghosts Walk These Rooms features a verse from Vancouver rapper Baba Brinkman with their second song All I Know sitting somewhere between Nick Cave and music from Twin Peaks. Another MC highlighted on the album is Junk, whose slick Sunlight follows Truefolds Six 15, a track reminiscent of something from Massive Attacks Mezzanine. Yet more sophisticated electronica comes from Bluelight, which features timeless velvety vocals from Andra Hector. Singer songwriter Dolenas bittersweet Romeo and Juliet features atmospheric guitars from none other than Ryan Guldmond from Mother Mother. Finally, the album showcases Corey Hawkins intense Follow Me. Probably the edgiest song on the album, but with no denying the pure emotion that he delivers. The overall sound has been likened to how the Velvet Underground might sound if they made music today after listening to Nirvana. Go figure, or just check it out. This compilation takes you on a journey through an emotional landscape, sometimes bleak, but always beautiful. A perfect soundtrack as the seemingly endless months of wintery rain and grey skies draw in
