Pop-rocking soul music by a female singer/songwriter/bassist/producer. Like nothing and everything you've heard. 6 MP3 Songs POP: with Electronic Production, URBAN/R&B: R&B Pop Crossover Details: WHO: MAGGIE KIM (aka "Notorious K.I.M." aka "Miss Maggie" aka "ROXX") WHAT: Rock Star Singer Songwriter Bassist Programmer Producer Exhibitionist (and what the hell, Dominatrix Control Freak) WHERE: New York City by way of Philly by way of Seoul SOUNDS LIKE: Listen to the clips, silly PEOPLE ARE SAYING: "This woman has it all going for her, looks, a great voice, and the right music to back her exciting and soulful vocal range. Sprinkles of pop, rock, and rhythm and blues find its way into the six tracks offered up on this EP. This serves as a taster, a quick fix of the variety she can offer the easily bored listener. I imagine once a full length CD hits the airwaves that something will happen for her rather quickly. I enjoyed the music and her voice, and that is the whole ball of wax for this listener. This young lady has a goal; she wants to change the way pop music looks and sounds. If she stays the course she is on, reaching the highest mountain could become a reality." -- Keith "MuzikMan" Hannaleck (muzikreviews.com) "With a rhythmic female vocalist sound, Maggie Kim has a very bright future. "Perfect" has a Toby Lightman/Bonnie McKee edge to it, and Kim's got the sultry vocals to allure listeners. "Coo" is a fun industrial sort of track. Did I mention she's got a rock version of Prince's "Raspberry Beret"? It's a great pop version with rock undertones, all professionally mixed. The great thing about Kim's music is that it's hard to define. Is she power girl rock? Female indie? Pop? Have fun figuring it out while listening to this album." -- DiscoveringArtists.com "Maggie Kim is a young woman who seems primed for pop stardom. Blending pop, rock, hip-hop, and a variety of other styles she is already creating some of the most infectious music currently coming out of New York City, and she's just getting started. There aren't many people that can be described by critics and fans alike as sexy, intelligent, edgy, passionate, witty, beautiful, provocative, and independent, but Maggie Kim is one such person." -- BestFemaleMusicians.com "As the first song begins, with a high pitched "doo doo doo, doo doo doo," and what sounds like an electronic drum kit, I wonder if this is yet another talent-less hack with a self-produced EP. There's a thin jewel case for one, and a picture of a scantily clad girl on the cover. But then, the song opens up more, and I'm starting to like the "doo doo doos." And then as the second number begins, there's a slightly raspy, ohh-so-sexy voice just oozing out of my speakers. Sheesh, where did she come from? Her bio gives the particulars, how she shifted from dark alt rock to the pop stuff. And while I haven't heard her previous stuff, the six numbers on this disc point to a formidable presence in the pop world. Her songs have strong hooks, are quite melodic, and heck, she even does an interesting cover of Prince's "Raspberry Beret." There is an appealing quality to her voice, as it balances between rasp and emotional desperation. On "Just Stay," a love ballad, she seamlessly shifts between grit and sadness. Sign me up as a fan." - NY Rock Street Beat "Lesson 1.5 began as a demo project that grew into a debut release for Penn grad-turned-burgeoning rock star Maggie Kim. Maggie wrote and produced her 6-song EP with Eve's Plum/Ruth Ruth guitarist Michael Kotch, beginning with rough guitar vocal sketches and ending up with a tightly knit, loop-based disc of radio-friendly alt/pop songs. Her unique sound and style, reflecting both Missy Elliot and Gwen Stefani influences, comes through on the album as clear as it does onstage--seductive and beautiful, yet also at times flashing a Courtney Love/Wendy O. Williams brazenness. Lesson 1.5 's strength is undeniable. Within 6 songs, she has managed to give listeners a thumbnail chronicle of this...this melange of sex, intelligence, beauty, wit, attitude and independence that manifests itself in human form as Maggie Kim." - Coyote Music
