New and raw singer-songwriter Andreea Pauta is not afraid to be everything and nothing, unlabeled but understood by everyone. This live album features songs for piano and voice that are pure and true to life. Tracks featuring drums, saxophone, guitar, vio 13 MP3 Songs FOLK: like Ani, JAZZ: Jazz Fusion Details: Romanian-born pianist and singer-songwriter, Andreea Pauta, is a voice unlike any other. She finished a BM degree from Boston's New England Conservatory in 2000. During her stay at NEC, she was priveledged to work with several teachers from the Classical, Jazz, and Contemporary Improvisation fields, that helped her make her sound and style more refined. This is why it is so difficult to place Dreea's music in a defined, boxed category of music...It contains bits of everything, is free and ubound, like her her spirit. The CD was recorded entirely live, by engineer Cameron Wiley, and has no overdubs in post-production (translation: this is real and raw, guys). It features her songs for piano and voice (she does both), along with arrangements (derrangements, she calls them) for guitar, drums, saxophone, violin, and viola. The range of lyrics travels from Jeremy's "lives next to Sears" to Tuesday Eve, depicting a dreamy bar scene, to Junk's deep lyrics "alone in the understanding of openness...how you..". This album is a perfect example of how music can still offer something new, something to stir the thoughts and emotions of the listener.
