Details: The pint-sized singer from Chicago is back with her friends including her own drummin' husband and dynamic daughter to bring another full-length cd. The subtle messages infused throughout the cd are both positive and inspirational to kids and adults. The melodies are addictive while the rhythm is undoubtedly infectious. This cd is a testament that children have better taste in music than we give them credit. Watch out: your non-breeding friends might mistake this for an adult cd especially the indie rock version of "This Little Heart of Mine" Warren Truitt of Kidsmusicthatrockssays: On what may be the kids' album with the grooviest title of the year, Chicago's Ann Torralba uses a mix of world, folk, and rock influences to create one of the best children's CDs of 2008. On her first CD for kids as Little Miss Ann, 2006's Music for Tots, Torralba featured a more folk rock sound. Well, the reverse is true on Clap for Love: rock is definitely emphasized over folk, as Ann and her full band flesh out originals and traditional tunes. A key to the album's success is Jon Williams' production: great drum sounds and warm, organic instrumentation throughout, very reminiscent of the whole mid-'70s L.A. crowd like James Taylor, Linda Ronstadt, Jackson Browne, The Eagles, etc. Clap for Love is for an older audience than Music for Tots; in fact, the same fans of Little Miss Ann's first CD will now dig her second, kinda like fans of A Hard Day's Night turning on to Rubber Soul. This is a beautiful album to be coming out in these times of increasing loss of uniqueness and personal conviction. It's very cool that a kids' artist will make a call-to-arms to the under-10 crowd, while entertaining them all the while ... have fun, but get involved. Groovy!
