Austin Singer Songwriter writes an eclectic collection that swings gospel, country, pop, rock and blues. Songs are both whimsical and thought provoking. The most fun you will have in a folk genre. 14 MP3 Songs FOLK: Folk Blues, ROCK: Acoustic Details: Steve's music is available for digital downloads at Itunes, MSN, Rhapsody etc.. Check out your favorite and most likely he is there! In the late 70s as Zeus Muldoon, in the 80s as Steve Duckfoot, Steve Ulrich was a mainstay in the Austin Folk scene. Sharing billing with such luminaries as Blaze Folley, Pat Mears, Lyle Lovett and Townes Van Zandt. Ulrich was considered a "best bet" by the local press and club goers alike. Then in 1986 he took "time off to grow up with my kids" and left the active music life for the next fifteen years. Resurfacing in 2000 as Steve Convenience, Ulrich teamed up with producer Brian Beattie on his stellar debut album Guy Down the Street. Released in 2001 the eclectic collection swings gospel, country, pop, rock and blues. He embarked on an ambitious performing schedule averaging about 200 dates a year since. Playing as a solo act or with his band or sometimes with a single side man, Steve has entertained thousands of enthusiastic listeners over the past few years. A Steve Ulrich show is a very fun way to spend an evening as Steve is a relaxed, friendly, intimate performer. He tells stories and reveals himself as an intelligent and caring individual. A funny man and a serious participant in the world.
