Acoustic/Electric Rock with something for everybody. Though acoustic guitar driven, Ggg incorporates a spectrum of instruments like the Bagpipe and Chello to go with the equally varied song topics. A listen through this album will challenge you to trust God through the trials of finding love and a place in this world. ...songs of God, girls and geeks is bluntly about: 1. The goodness and grace of God 2. The mystery of love (for a guy, that means girls...and how he can't figure them or his own feelings out for that matter) 3. Geeks...well, geeks like, me really. Scott Michael is unashamed to sing about the geeky side of himself and the funny side of our human nature. Lyrics from the song Bailin' Me Out say it well: "...this man who I'm speaking of is trying his best but of his life he keeps making a mess intentions are good but that will get you so far like a steering wheel without a car. Well lately it seems I've been screwing things up and given poison I think I'd drink a cup but do you grow tired Lord of bailin' me out once again?" ...songs of God, girls and geeks is sure to find it's niche between the records of Chris Rice, Steven Curtis Chapman and Matthew West. Scott Michael is currently serving in the Army on Active Duty after being called up with his Texas Army National Guard unit. He will be in Iraq from around December 2004 till February 2006. He is the Medical Platoon Leader in a combat arms unit. Prayer requests include: saftey for his soldiers and the men he supports, that the message of Gosple of God will go forth in a dark country, and a shameless plug that you buy his album.
