"This is a new book that aims to provide an overview of all neoplastic conditions in haematology. It is generally well written, with many useful diagrams and tables. It is potentially useful for anyone with an interest in this field, including haematologists, histopathologists and scientists. more suitable for an American audience, and indeed includes a study guide for trainees taking US board examinations. I would recommend that it should be available in libraries and within haematology or histopathology departments."
