He asked if she would be interested in doing some live performances with him in support of that album, and after hearing it, she readily agreed. Their musical connection led to a deep friendship and they continued to perform together throughout the years, while also being involved in outside projects and raising families. In 2005, they decided to collaborate as co-writers for the first time having lots of material since they were both going through major life changes. The result was Central Connection released in 2006 on Song Crisis Records and is a collection of songs that reflect on that year of their lives and their new-found feelings for each other. Kit and Tanya continue to write award-winning songs recognized by organizations like West Coast Songwriters.
