Country/Pop 16 MP3 Songs COUNTRY: Country Pop, COUNTRY: Country Folk Details: About Lane Lane has the voice, visage and spirit of an angel and a natural gift for singing and performing. Through a career that has defied easy classification she has consistently succeeded at the highest levels in a variety of contexts, from country to pop to jazz. With the release of Pieces of Life, Lane's latest album, Lane presents the breadth of her musical vision. This masterwork, five years in the making, combines songs written by Lane with material written specifically for her by several songwriting luminaries and reprises her greatest hits, the Oscar nominated "Over You" and her reconfiguration of "The Yellow Rose of Texas" to include a woman's perspective. Her intense love of singing was established by the time she was five. She wrote her first song at the age of twelve. While still in her teens, she began a highly successful jingle career singing solos for many popular TV and radio commercials like McDonalds, 7Up, Kentucky Fried Chicken and Juicy Fruit Gum to name a few. Amazingly, her incredible voice generated interest worldwide when she became The Voice of the XIV Olympics singing the commercials ("You've known us all along") for Beatrice Foods, who was the main sponsor for the Olympics that year. It was reported that people found themselves listening for Lane and those commercials all during the games. During this time she also landed her first record deal with GRT Records. Her first single release became a #1 record in many country markets. Her work as an outstanding vocalist continued as she recorded performances for two CBS Movies of the Week. In Country Gold, actress Linda Hamilton lip-synced to Lane's vocals. In The Gift of Life starring Susan Dey, Lane sang Just a Little More Love which received an Emmy Nomination. Not content with the direction of her burgeoning career, she sought to become a recognized voice and soon after, she leaped on to the country and pop record charts with an Oscar nominated song, "Over You from the film Tender Mercies," which brought her a "Top New Female Vocalist" nomination by the Academy of Country Music. Lane is the first female in country to have an Oscar-nominated hit from a soundtrack album. She had hits with "He Burns Me Up," her self penned "He's Taken," and the stirring "Baby's Eyes." She co-wrote and sang "The Yellow Rose of Texas" theme from the NBC series with Johnny Lee," and the record soared to the number one position on the country charts, with a hit music video to match (Click to Lane's official Web site to view part of it). As a result, she received her first BMI Most Performed Song of the Year award. Lane takes her songwriting as serious as her singing. Her uncanny creative energy always keeps her exploring new and exciting recording projects. From her own projects to co-writing Anne Murray's album title song "Hottest Night of the Year," she is determined to have a lasting contribution to her field. She takes responsibility for the words she writes. For example, her critically acclaimed song "All the Unsung Heroes" aids in the healing process of Vietnam veterans and their families. On television, Lane enjoyed working with Danny DeVito and the infamous cast of the legendary show, TAXI. She made her dramatic acting debut beside Robert Desiderio in ABC's Heart of the City, where she played the role of country singer Jenny Jamison, and performed three songs, one being her own Everything But True. As she performs in concert, audiences often describe how she sends emotional chills with her dynamic range of voice and song. She has literally played all over the world. Where women find her as a genuine friend they can relate to, men find her beautiful, but so genuine that she is refreshingly rare. Lane has shared the stage with a list of talent that would be truly defined as the "Who's Who" in country music, but as you can imagine she embraces those moments with those no longer with us such as Dottie West, Tammy Wynette, Grandpa Jones, Eddie Rabbitt, Keith Whitley and Merle Travis. Today, Lane continues her musical life with the integrity that has become the hallmark of her career. She recently released a CD of the great "standards," which she recorded under her given name Elni, (which is Greek for Lane). Some of the titles are, I'll Be Seeing You, Smile, and I Wish You Love. The CD, entitled Familiar Places has received critical acclaim, one being from the legendary jazz great Louie Bellson who said: "Elni has a wonderful voice and is reminiscent of the great singers such as, Ella Fitzgerald, Sara Vaughan and Pearl Bailey." Pieces of Life, her latest, is a gleaming jewel of a recording that finally showcases Lane's talent in the proper perspective and a collaborative triumph with crucial input from a host of Lane's musical friends and admirers. These projects are on her own record label, which she named RECORDS RECORDS (1998). It was always her dream to have this as an opportunity to do music her way. Within one year of the label's opening, she continues the dream by affiliating herself and the record label with Scream Recordings, who are distributed through Navarre. Lane's diversity as a successful vocalist in country music, singing mainstream jazz to recording a duet with Bob Seger (who said to her, "I don't think of you as a country singer... you're rock!"), proves she is truly one of those unique talents that sings, writes and performs with integrity.
