Packed with remixes by friends Autovon, Electric Bird Noise, John Omen, PASK, PsiVamp, Stan Satin, The Devil The Worm many other great artists. 19 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Industrial, ELECTRONIC: Hardcore Techno Details: ACT 1: We awake to the flow of Nigredos opening track floating somewhere in The Afterlife, catapulting us back in time to a day before machines dominated our psyche. From there we are pulverized by Autovons epic More Than Machine only to be carried further through the circuitry by the Reverend. Hudson that is. And our prayers will be answered, if not destroyed by the roar of opposing thoughts, rendered by the amazing Jon Thompson. The groove continues on to the tune of PsiVamps Stomp still the candle burns . . . enough to light the way for our poet laureate John Omen, reciting lyrics from Right Wing Conspiracy fueling the premonition generation. But something is not quite right it is a disgrace, the time we waste, only to find it has indeed run out . . . Carl Jung would be proud of Stan Satins opus In A Dubsense landing the synchronous track 9. While the dynamic duo have cast a spell . . . as told by The Devil The Worm through their incantation Sight Unseen . . . And daylight fades into night. ACT 2: These birds do make new friends generated by the fury of Brians Electric Bird Noise, introducing us to the chaos monger himself . . . Zod. All hail ZOD his technical prowess! Australia . . . bombastic beats. The earth has been scorched by PASK with his aboriginal frequencies. Just in case you havent figured it out, the answer is "Meconium" from "re[deploy]" aka, Ilium Opium the subsonic tracks from Xero/G or the digital algebra theorized by Searad reminding us that everything is golden in Less Than I. "Industrial meets techno, meets more . . ."
