Details: About Waiting In Line Waiting In Line was a title that was originally suggested by Phan Nguyen of Talent Show Recordings (the label that released Hello Dennis Driscoll in 1999). Phan and Dennis Driscoll were going to put out a set of discs compiling Driscoll's earlier years but sadly, that never happened. However, Driscoll decided to release everything digitally in July of 2008. That is how this new-old album was born! Originally, a lot of the material was released on Driscoll's label which was (at the time in 1997 and such) called 'Brown Recordings.' The earliest recorded song on this album is a Dennis Driscoll song from... probably 1983. It is called 'Popeye Can Kill Monsters' and features Driscoll and his father, Les Driscoll who talks a bit at the end to say 'that's very good.' These songs were mainly recorded in Astoria, Oregon (at KMUN) and Ilwaco Washington (at Driscoll's Ilwaco, Washington house) from the mid-'90s up until 1998 or so. Enjoy the tape hiss and the Low-Fi rumble. Sweet dreams! Note Dennis Driscoll is an independent pop musician and cartoonist from the Pacific Northwest. Normally, he composes on the guitar, his computer or on a piano but also composes music while singing to himself. Facts 1. Years active: 1996-present 2.
