Special guests trombonists Roswell Rudd and Max Perkoff with the trio perform the compositions of Thelonious Monk. 9 MP3 Songs JAZZ: Bebop, BLUES: Jazzy Blues Details: Monks Music Trio featuring very special guests Roswell Rudd and Max Perkoff on Trombones Chuck Bernstein, drums, Si Perkoff, piano; Sam Bevan, bass Chuck Bernstein formed Monks Music Trio in August 1999. Initially, two purposes guided the creation of this group: To perform the compositions of Thelonious Monk and to showcase the talents of pianist Si Perkoff, who Bernstein considers the best interpreter of Monks music in the San Francisco Bay Area. Since then, the trio has released two critically acclaimed CDs, Harmony Of Odd Numbers, and Think Of One. With the release of their third CD, the trio has expanded to a quintet for the recording Monks Bones. Bernstein tells the story: ...a sound kept coming into my consciousness, almost on a daily basis. It was the sound of two trombones playing Monks tunes with the trio. It wasnt just any two trombonists - specifically, it was Roswell Rudd and Max Perkoff. In the early 1960s Roswell Rudd and Steve Lacy created the first jazz group (other than Monks bands) to concentrate on Thelonious Monk compositions. Rudd has become one of the worlds leading modern and world music pioneers, performing at jazz festivals worldwide and at leading venues in New York City. About the CD Roswell says: Thelonious Monk was quite simply one of the greatest visionaries to ever pass through the planet Earth. During his presence in the human community, he gave us an array of glimpses into the universe of possibility. The musicians on this album are striving to navigate the course set by his sighting, if only to re-explore some of what he discovered. Its a challenging adventure, but we have our hearts, minds, and ears open and no end of passion for this glorious work. Wont you join us? ...a trombonist of such sweeping power and majesty that he transcends all styles. - John Wilson, The New York Times "Perkoffs effervescent personality did positively affect both his and his colleagues' playing. He's relaxed on the

'bone, has a nice tone and doesn't try to play 64 notes per measure." - Phil Elwood - San Francisco Examiner Reviews of Monks Music Trio The first CD by San Francisco-based Monks Music Trio, Harmony of Odd Numbers, was one of the best jazz CDs of 2003. The follow-up [Think Of One] is just as good - to put it simply, nobody does Monk better than these guys. - Richard Duck Baker, East Bay Express. ...it is Bernsteins Monkish flavor with his oblique drum accents and a melodic notion of rhythm in both his accompaniment and four bar exchanges with Perkoff...Monks fans will appreciate this versatile conception of his tunes as well as the trios ability to avoid a note-for-note stylish rip off. - Paula Edelstein, soundsoftimelessjazz
Can somebody please bring this trio to Europe? To adapt what Sonny Rollins said of a more pianistically idiosyncratic Monk specialist, does anybody realize how good these guys are? Vivifying! - Robert R. Calder, popmatters.com
