Like his father, famous fine-arts painter and illustrator Alexander Ross, Alan mixes instruments like oils on a palate - a fine blend of strong color, contrast and balance, reflecting his father's eye. The heavy electric guitar work of Scott Jarrett (brother to Keith Jarrett, jazz virtuoso) on the title track strongly contrasts with the delicate mandolin work of Bryan Cumming on Dance With My Wife. The instrumentation is a masterpiece, and includes the work of Jarrett on autoharp, piano, keyboards, guitar, bass, drums and vocals; while Cumming excels on guitar, mandolin, bass, baritone and soprano recorders, drums, and keyboards. Added to their superb workmanship are Ross's vocals that perfect pitch that makes him so desirable in all studio session work, that voice described as "warm butter melting on a plate." Mix in Ross' very present guitar work, and you've got a CD worth sharing. Ross's fans claim they never tire of listening to him over and over and over, and indeed his sales reflect repeat buyers. This special collection is called the Romance CD by fans. It features songs written for Ross's wife, Caroline, with whom he has had a longtime affair of legendary proportions. The Old Romantic's heart is on his sleeve in tunes like "Dance With My Wife," and "Simpatico." But it's the cut titled, The Ring, that has special significance for Ross. He wrote and sang the tune as his wedding vows to Caroline, and it has become a wedding standard. This cut will be included in Ross's spring 2004 release "The Ring," a small compilation of songs appropriate for weddings. In 1999, Ross and Caroline co-authored a book called Love is Forever, a small simple book crammed with words of love. More information about the Love Book and special pricing when you buy the book along with the CD, is available on our website at WWW.ROSSMUSIC.NET. A bottle of Chateau Ste Michelle, this CD, the Love Book, and Thee. Life is sweet. Order today.
