His on-going project has been to produce guitar music in the most unconventional way. "I wanted to try and capture a sound that is more mainstream", Garner says, "but using only a guitar." And did he ever. Using nothing but a Parker Fly guitar, Eric created some more very relaxing ambient songs. Utilizing mutli-track recording techniques, Eric textures and layers several guitar melodies, rhythms, and digital effects to produce an intersting and innovative audio experience. "This time I tried even harder to come up with some interesting, yet entertaining and relaxing music.", says Garner, "And I included a tribute to the late Michael Hedges, who inspired a lot of what you hear on this album. I practiced for two years to perform that song. And it's the only one that does not use any overdubs. Just one continual, complete take. Needless to say, I'm very proud of that song." The first track, Beneath The Breeze, also now appears on an international New Age compilation album as well as being played in rotation over 100 times each day in retail establishments all across the world. "I think people really enjoy that song because of the melody. It's very catchy.", admits Eric as he describes what some of his fans feel is his biggest hit so far.
