Richards wrote the original version of What I Want with dj/tv host TC Callendar and Trinidad music producer Richard Char Su Ahong. The song became a hot favourite for Carnival 2007 in his home country of Trinidad and Tobago. Music impresario, Christian Carbaza sent the Caribbean hit to Euro remix star, Bob Sinclar and his version initially launched the international hit. What I Want showcases FIREBALLs unique singing/chanting operatic vocal style that makes a FIREBALL record instantly identifiable and which has rocked club charts worldwide. Rohan Richards was born on September 7, 1980, where he grew up as the eldest of five in the small Trinidadian village of Sea Lots. Ive been singing since I was aware that I could, Richards said. Even then, the beginnings of FIREBALLs unique operatic chanting/singing twist that showcases his unique singing style, was already beginning to develop. I would always put my own spin on the melody, he said. At 16, he entered a neighbourhood chant out competition where he was rechristened FIREBALL. The chant out changed my life, he said. Fast-forward to 2006, where Richards had honed his chanting, singing and songwriting talents to a fine point and was beginning to attract attention in his homeland. Richards entered the first edition of Synergy TVs hit show SOCA STAR competition, the top rated tv show which is the Caribbeans equivalent of AMERICAN IDOL. At the tv shows finals, held at the National Stadium, FIREBALL sung his own composition Danger and won the show, becoming the 2006 Soca Star, effectively launching his career to a new level! FIREBALL hopes the worldwide success of What I Want will help spread the word that Caribbean music and the infectious rhythms of Soca music are undeniable and poised to penetrate the world music scene!
