Ethereal, Reverbed folk-drenched with an Indie pop-rock flair. Sultry female vocals reminiscent of Hope Sandoval of Mazzy Star with U2/Daniel Lanois-esque atmospheric guitar effects. 13 MP3 Songs POP: Folky Pop, ROCK: Americana Details: "Superbly produced with raw honesty and painful beauty..." -The Oregonian Watsonville Patio's anticipated 6th and latest CD, "Beneath the Leaves" is a gentle gem of an album. It's serene glow features 13 tracks (all written and produced by Watsonville Patio in their "home recording studio basement" of Portland, OR) that call to mind the dreamy acoustica of artists such as Mazzy Star, Fleetwood Mac and more currently, My Morning Jacket. Drenched in the band's favored reverb, folky pop-rock style, "Beneath the Leaves" reflects the subtle beauty and images of rainy days spent in the city of Portland, OR and the messiness of love and loss. WP's influences shine through on this new record- as longtime fans of U2 and Daniel Lanois's Production, to classic albums like Fleetwood Mac's "Rumours" and Neil Young's "Harvest Moon", to country artist Emmylou Harris's "Wrecking Ball" and new bands like My Morning Jacket's "It Still Moves"..
