Details: Guitarist Antonitas D'Havila is internationally recognized as one of the world's finest Flamenco players. Born in England of Gypsy ancestry in 1949, he was first introduced as a child to the guitar by his father. Inspired by the other great Flamenco players, he perfected his technique while living and concertizing throughout Spain and the south of France. At age twenty, he signed his first recording contract and has since produced numerous Flamenco discs. A fiercely independent artist, he plays over a hundred different Flamenco variations of his own creation. The critics rave about his bravado style. Here is what the Guitar Player magazine has to say about him: "D'Havila is a descendent of the Gypsies, and his music shows that some of their flair was passed down to him; it is vented through his excellence on the Flamenco guitar." Recital tours have included concert tours throughout Europe and North America, including Carnegie Hall. D'Havila is featured throughout the world in concert and on films, commercials, radio and on television.
