He grew up listening to his dad play drums in a band and acquired an intense interest in music. He was an accomplished drummer himself through high school and college, and began his songwriting career while playing with several local bands. He came to Dallas as a truck driver for a company that moves the US mail. His music career took off when he moved out from behind the drums and became the lead singer for Southbound Texas 35. He has an incredible bluesy-country-rock voice and sings with tremendous range and feeling. His original songs echo both his Oklahoma roots and his current Texas home. Southbound Texas 35s other band members bring decades of experience playing many styles of music. Guitarist and songwriter, Alex Townes, president of the Dallas Songwriters Association, is an experienced country and singer/songwriter performer and provides the backbone of the bands mix of acoustic and electric sound. Drummer and songwriter, Richard Kirwan, brings his experience with many bands including the Christian band, Habitation, and rock bands such as Sam Citrus and the Merciless Tangerine and Plastic Glass.
