It is a sort of Bay Renaissance, a rebirth of Bay culture being that the Bay Area rap scene suffered a terrible commercial loss after the untimely death of our most famed hero Tupac Shakur. The Bay Area has always been home to Revolutionary Minds; going as far back as the Civil Rights movement with the controversial Black Panther Party. Following the Demise of the Panther Party in the late 60's and early 70's, the infamous Bay Area was then transformed into a drug war zone, when it became the Crack Capital of the United States during the 1980's (Regan Administration). This rich history of militancy and violence was the back drop for each member of The Conference, being that they are products of this environment. But the ghetto breeds champions, which is to no wonder why the Western Conference has risen up out of the decades of ashes to become a new voice for the Bay Area. With undeniable talent and a signature sound the members of The Western Conference Pride themselves on musical excellence. It's easy to see that the Conference is a driven and highly determined group of individuals; this is evident in the dramatic history of how the Conference came about. The legend of the Conference goes: that in several years past the founding fathers Crook, G-Baby the Great, and Yasou made strategic power moves and hustled up what they called "Conference Money" to fund for a studio. Purchasing this studio was a pivotal turning point in these young adult's lives and the beginning of a new era in Bay Area music. From this day forth they swore that everything done under the Conference name would be to the utmost level of expertise. The dream of these three Young Black Entrepreneurs has been ever-present in today's society. Judging by their list of consistent hits the Western Conference has kept the streets ablaze. From the dropping of their first commercial work, "Western Conference Presents: The Scouting Report", the Conference exemplified true Bay Area hustle moving major units the old fashion way "Out of the Trunk." Utilizing the G.A.M.E. that was passed to them by their predecessors, Too Short and E-40, a young Conference in their early stages slung CD's on blocks, in malls, and on street corners throughout the Bay Area and rest of California. Making significant profits from this primitive grind, the Conference name spread like a wildfire throughout the most notorious ghettos, projects, and even suburbs throughout the greater part of the U.S. The Conference made it a novelty thing to include the wishes and sentiments of the streets in their timeless music. They make it a high priority to include in every body of work songs for the gangsters or not, ladies, and songs for the kids (The Conference loves the kids). This is what puts the Conference into the elite class of musicians; which is the fact that they can appeal to all audiences. The Conference most pride accomplishment: dropping the classic disc "Western Conference Entertainment presents: Pros and Cons", receiving consistent radio play from the famed Bay Area radio station 106 KMEL, to being complemented nationwide for superior musical talent by the legendary rap mogul, the Bay Area's own E-40. Bay Area fans are truly appreciative and 100 confident in the Western Conference's ability, believing they have earned the right to carry the torch passed among Bay Area's Rap elites. With the Conference's latest monumental achievement, The Jacka (of the legendary group the Mob Figaz) presents: The Western Conference's Conference Calls Mix tape. This collaboration is surely a dream come true for the Conference, being that the Jacka along with the Mob Figaz are heroes in Northern California. The Mob Figaz a respectable group that has collectively sold over 220,000 records independently and has seen the Western Conference's potential; and has decided to aide them in their goals of establishing themselves as top tier musicians. With a Western Conference film division, and a Conference clothing line in the works, it is obvious that The Western Conference will cement their name in Bay Area history, and lift the Bay Area and surrounding regions to an international position in the years to come. Conference Stand Up!!!!
