Satire, for those of you who don't know, Caldera is a state of mind, a philosophy, not just music, it's a way of life, a symbol of expression and meaning, and understatement of how society overlooks the goodness and sadness in people, and makes them under 7 MP3 Songs ROCK: Acoustic, POP: Delicate Details: For those of you who don't know, Caldera is a state of mind, a philosophy, not just music, it's a way of life, a symbol of expression and meaning, and understatement of how society overlooks the goodness and sadness in people, and makes them understandable and cold. That is Caldera. We here in Caldera, the collective 'us,' support consumerism, as the basis of society. We live for making money and that's what we are about. Even though we make none, we are still drawn to create for the purposes of commercialism. Praise the almighty dollar, it must be love. "This is about the funkiest groove I've ever heard. The arrangement really gets you moving. The syncopated organ riff is very tight. That's a good vocal delivery, too. It kind of reminds me of the late Brad Nowell from Sublime. And that bassline is just way too funky. I liked it." - Garageband "I'm impressed with this band, and think they might have something different." Jorge Ramirez - Fan Comment This tune has a very cool approach, mixing Mick jagger-ish vocals with 50s space pod sounds and lounge organ. I feel like this song has a lot of potential. Outsider funkateer, I give you credit for doing something completely unique. "Sheka shek it down ... -Garageband Even though this is not the type of pop/rock I care to listen to, something about this song really intrigued me. Maybe it was the superheterodyne vocal intro that grabbed me. Overall, the song and its craftmanship is way above average. Who do you sound like? Yourself, pal. This is truly an original. -Garageband
