A true Vessel of Funk and Soul with a twist of Jazz, Wendisue poetically covers the territories of life and loving with a refreshing outlook that makes you hungry for more. 5 MP3 Songs URBAN/R&B: Funk, URBAN/R&B: Soul Details: It doesn't take much time in listening to Wendisue's music before you can rest assured that she's here to stay. A true vessel of Funk and Soul with a twist of Jazz, make the possibilities of her musical journey endless. Keeping with the genre of artists including D'Angelo, Jill Scott and Erykah Badu, Wendisue prepares her music as food for the soul. The songs on HomeGrown are a reflection of some of her strongest influences including Donny Hathaway, Chaka Khan and Ella Fitzgerald. Most influential however is her father, Ellis Hall, former lead singer with Tower of Power, who taught her to indulge in her passion rather than run from it. It was because of that passion that Wendisue was able to Produce, Write and Record the majority of the music on HomeGrown in her home studio. (Thus the title of the EP) From the Funk driven, HipHop based single, 'The Sickness' to the Soulful lullaby, 'The LaLa Song' Wendisue poetically covers the territories of life and loving with a refreshing outlook that makes you hungry for more. Heres What Music Connection had to say: Vol. XXVIII. No.16 8/2/04 to 8/15/04 "A self-produced five-song disc from this artist has a heady mix of soul, funk, jazz and very good singing that (on "Suffer the Loss" a honey sweet love song) makes us think of India Arie and Jill Scott. Meanwhile, "Funky Road" evokes comparisons to Lauryn Hill. "The LaLa Song" is a soothing, laidback, seductive track that convinces us that this artist's skills as a vocalist, songwriter and producer are for real. Music Supervisors might like her ready-to-go product."
