Details: ELMO TAYLOR is a Rock, Folk, and Blues Duo featuring David Rhodes and Sarah Greene. The musical styles range from nostalgic acoustic folk, to driving electric rock, to virtuosic blues to latin that makes you want to move. Sarah Greene plays the Electric Bass, Acoustic Guitar, and some occasional horn (French Horn that is) with Elmo Taylor. This half of the duo contributes a few original songs, sings lead and back-up vocals, and provides much of the arrangements. Sarah grew up surrounded by music. She began Suzuki violin at age three, began horn at age eleven, and picked up guitar and bass guitar in high school. Sarah received a Bachelor's and Master's degree in Horn performance from the University of Cincinnati - College Conservatory of Music and the Indiana University School of Music respectively. In the last several years, she has focused more energy on guitar and bass guitar as well as songwriting. Her collaboration with David Rhodes, guitarist songwriter, was a welcome inspiration and led to the formation of ELMO TAYLOR. David Rhodes plays Acoustic and Electric Guitar, and provides most of the original songs for Elmo Taylor. He has been playing guitar and writing songs for many years, but only recently has he shared his talent. David's songwriting talent spans from folk ballads to provocative blues to good-old rock roll. His thoughtful, meaningful and clever lyrics can lighten your heart, touch your soul, and make you laugh.
