Thanks for visiting, listening, and reading. I am very pleased to be able to bring you these songs. Each one represents a slice of my experience, or vivid imaginings, in this wonderful reality we find ourselves in.

If this sounds existential you would be correct! Life is as obvious as what we see, but we get glimpses of the great unseen that some of us try to render as they flash by. That's why songwriting is such a charge.

Where does the inspiration come from? I don't know. From everything, from nothing, is the dumb but correct answer. It is my heart-felt wish and hope that the Universe grants you everything you need in abundance to carry out your life mission. TRACK NOTES Somewhere Doin Something Procrastination is definitely a lifestyle choice. The philosophy is that if you wait long enough, many things take care of themselves or other people will take of what you should have. This song celebrates a connoisseur of this lifestyle, carefully cultivated through years of dedicated practice, who shall remain nameless. This Ain't Love Between work, family, social responsibilities, unwanted impositions, and endless opportunities for diversions, we can easily lose connection to those we love and to the purpose of our own life. The excess of want, in stark contrast to the excess of need in the world, can be resolved if we believe in such a goal.

A change in attitude, an act of generosity, recognition of those we love and of the humanity of all people, are small steps that will help us find our way. Thunder in Your Voice This song is dedicated to those brave road warriors who are away from home trying to earn a buck. Separation does lead to stress between lovers and to that inevitable, dreaded phone call, usually at night when you call home to check-in after finishing a gig. I wrote this song at a bar one night during one of these road trips. No One Else But You Life is sweet when you find your soul mate that person who enjoys doing what you like to do and vice-a-versa. Borderline of Love And then there are relationships that are almost right, where you just cant figure out what to do next to cement the bond. So when the tormented soul sings, I have a map to your heart with some pieces missing, he, or she, is truly lost and is pleading for guidance. Painted Dreams This is a serious song about a serious issue. Post-traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) remains a legacy of war for many of our veterans. Haunted by uncontrollable flashbacks, while awake or asleep, these individuals are vividly reminded of the trauma and horrors that they experienced. Accompanied by emotional detachment and highly reactive responses to everyday events (hyperactive startle reflex), normal functioning is difficult to achieve without medical and psychological help. Painted Dreams is a song about coping with PTSD. Whisky Blues Alcoholism is a fact of life for many. Functional alcoholics have a story to tell about their love/hate relationship with the bottle. And nested in with the pain and angst is a bit of humor and a curious acceptance, or at least, resignation. Keep Walkin The foreign policy bungle with Iraq was the inspiration for this song. The warped rendition of the U.S. National Anthem and the chorus of acirema (America) reflect the sentiments of many that our leadership is misguided, and has taken our great country in the wrong direction. White Stretch Limo The idea for this song came from an experience in the Bahamas. A bunch of us were looking for a ride when we snagged this white limo. The chauffeur said he had just lost a booking and was available. We went off down unfamiliar roads goin off to die? Morbid thought, but the concern was voiced. The twist in this song is that the lyrics are allegorical. Hint, the white limo symbolizes life on this planet. Wings of Freedom I wrote "Wings" as a tribute to those rare individuals who possess the courage to rise above their fear and inspire others to organize against oppression and human rights abuses. Of course, rebellion does not equate with peace, and the establishment of human rights is at best tenuous over time. The long term solution centers on eliminating fear and respecting the dignity of all life. New Jersey Cowboy New Jersey Cowboy traces its roots back to many of the popular stereotypes dumped on all us good folks who live here in the Garden State. No, we are not myopic like our neighbors from New York (ouch!). We try to get along with our countrymen and welcome their ideas and ways, to the extent possible. Tolerance is very important, but so is the availability of remote acreage for the disposal of inconvenient problems. Thats why we support green space preservation. But believe me, not everyone heres a mobster, despite media promotion to the contrary. Well have to work dat out with those no good ##$!s who spread that myth. Educate 'emin a non-threatening way of course. What are ya thinkin, huh? Relax a minute. And the Turnpike, what a thing of beauty. Because of our budget mess, some people from you know where want mortgage it off for a quick buck. Great financial minds are at work here, I can feel it. Which brings me to my horse, poor old fella. Sometimes he forgets who I am when I stop in, that good for nothin. But I love him. He spends all his time with the mares and other stallions, hey, its a free world, dont bother me none. I get a stud fee when things go right, so its win-win all around. He looks happy. Good for him. But ultimately, the guitars in the song kind of cry a little, kinda down in the soul it resonates right here in my heart, cause sometimes thats the way I feel. Lucky me.
