In this music they were consumed with the trials, situations and even the celebration of someone who seem to live the streets. And so these people came to one conclusion, I Bet He Grind, and Bettie Grind was named. Hailing from Charlotte, NC, Bettie spit his first verse in his best friends living room on top of Outkasts Black Ice beat. He continued to toy with the craft, but never gave it full attention until competing on Power 98s Free Style Friday where rappers battle for bragging rights. After Bettie Grinds countless wins between 2004 and 2005, D.J. Mr. Incognito requested he drop a verse for Incogs 5 oclock traffic jam mix on Sept. 25, 2005. Inspired by rap legends B.I.G., Jay-Z and Nas as well as others like Outkast and Raekwon. Grinds style is groundbreaking, shattering every bar to resound the life of a hustler one verse at a time. In June of 2004, Bettie Grind was chosen out of 500 acts as one of 30 to perform in Forever Loved Entertainments (E.A.R.S.) talent showcase. He went on to become one of the top five finalists at Club Babalua in Times Square, NY. The song Bettie performed was also chosen by E.A.R.S. to be placed on their compilation album, which was released in November of 2004. He was requested to come back to New York and perform the song at Club Shyne during the E.A.R.S. album release party. Medici, Da StreetCaptain, of Radio One asked Bettie to release his club single, Fa Sho Pimpin. The single is a track off of his debut album, Thrilla. Fa Sho Pimpin has received rave reviews and mix show spins from D.J. Mr. Incognito of Power 98, Boogie D, Lady Q, and Medici of Radio One. Radio Host, Fly Ty, requested Bettie to release the track to Charlottes #1 Hip Hop and R&B radio station so it could be worked into rotation. The song was placed on The Morning Madhouses special feature, The Next Big Thing. This feature allows local artists to introduce their music to listeners, radio personalities and the stations program directors. This audience has the ability to vote the song into rotation. Fa Sho Pimpin' was also given the first and only 100 rating in the features history. Therefore, Program Director Teri Avery and Music Director Deon Coles scheduled the song into rotation August 2005. Bettie Grind...HOT! There are no other words needed, says radio host Fly Ty. Bettie Grind has the charismatic style of rap tycoon Jay-Z, but with the lyrical energy of rap mogul Ludacris, says D.J.
