A new acoustic artist drawing from a wide base of influence to form an inventive brand of acoustic blues and rock 5 MP3 Songs FOLK: Alternative Folk, ROCK: Acoustic Details: Bob Marley once wrote, "One good thing about music, when it hits, you feel no pain" . . . When Josh Weinstein was in the eighth grade, he was diagnosed with diabetes. Already dealing with the awkwardness that accompanies being thirteen years old, he now deal with an illness that not one of his friends shared. He was embarrassed. He was alone. He picked up a guitar. Since then, the guitar has not left the Boston native's hands. He has been singing and playing anywhere and everywhere. From in front of the mirror in his mother's room to the stages of New York's Knitting Factory, The Bitter End, and The Living Room. From late two hour sets in coffee shops in Syracuse, NY to the venues of London's Soho region. From the garages and basements of friends to headlining spots in Boston, Washington DC, and Sydney, AUS. Josh loves to perform. And it shows. He leaves everything on the stage; past, present, and future. decibel. is the love child of Josh Weinstein's love for acoustic rhythms and loud, pulse bending rock. Where the simplest folk meets the hardest scream. It's the idea that the raw, stripped down nature of acoustic music can have the power of an army at war. Josh is currently recording his first full-length album with Anywhere But Home Records.
