JOHN AJILORE is a story teller who is able to influence an audience to visualize what he is seeing as well as experience what he is feeling. He was influenced by rappers in his Queens neighborhood, and began experimenting by combining his personality and life experiences into lyrical form until he found his identity. After years of doing mixtapes, networking and recording demos, John decided to make a move. He turned to his childhood friend Ayatollah, who produced tracks for (Styles P, Pharoahe Monch, Mos Def, Inspector Deck and upcoming rapper Space). Ayatollah knows John's style, and as a result was able to hit him with tracks (N#$*az Rhym'n' Rock Wit Me) that brought out his skillz.

MIKEY D grew up in Laurelton Queens, an area that is famous for Park jams and MC battles. And it was at those battles that he became a local legend. Tha BANK STOPPAZ wasn't a planned group, they were at a Bronx Studio recording individual tracks when the Producer asked them to record a track together. GENTILE is a Far Rockaway Queens rapper we met at a recording studio. It was a case of he was too good to pass up. A raw, unclassified, in your face flow is the best way to describe his style. He rewarded our confidence by writing and recording hot tracks for this project and tracks for future use.
