Growing up, Olivia was constantly surrounded by music. Her father, Peter Pettengill, played guitar and lead vocals in The Barnstormers, and lead guitar, vocals and accordion in Planet Zydeco. Both her fathers and brothers dedication and love of music helped her to discover her own musical passion. Olivia wrote her first song lyrics to Why 'My Hangin Around in the eighth grade to a chord progression of her elder brother James. This experience uncovered a lyrical talent she never knew existed, and instilled in her a desire to learn to play the guitar. Following this revelation, Olivia took up songwriting and singing as a release from the chaos of everyday life, and that same year she recorded a few works in her aunts (singer songwriter Marianne Chatterton (mchatterton.com) independent recording studio. Together they planned on someday recording a full album. By her senior year in high school, Olivia was presented with the perfect opportunity to make this goal happen. Through the Senior Project Program at Stoneleigh-Burnham School, Olivia was allowed to create a class out of her passion and recorded her first full length CD entitled "Stained".
