The saddest album ever recorded. 14 MP3 Songs POP: Delicate, POP: Piano Details: Dylan has BLOOD ON THE TRACKS. Springsteen has TUNNEL OF LOVE. Moes Haven has SOMEONE ELSE. For years, Farley and Scalzo have claimed that they had an album in them that would hold its own beside the classics mentioned above. Today we learn that they were right. SOMEONE ELSE. is devastatingly sad, heartbreakingly sad, and, at times, wildly funny. Where most sad albums deal with lost loves, this one deals with loves that never happened. Regret and longing permeate through every track. These first-person tracks are sung from the safety and protection of a fort made out of blankets in a small apartment where the singer looks back at what went wrong, what never happened, what should have happened and what might have happened. How can the saddest album ever recorded also be wildly funny? Well, in the world of Moes Haven, the line between heartache and humor does not exist. Everything that is sad is also funny. No one can dwell in this kind of overwhelming sadness without realizing how ridiculous it really is. Or, at least Moes Haven can't do that. And so they've combined sorrow and longing with their own unique brand of nihilistic humor. This is the saddest album of all time. It's also the greatest album of all time.
