Early on you could tell Coffey was born to perform. He would stand in the bed of his dad's farm truck and perform for the passing cars on the road in front of his house. He began singing in church at age 6 and fell in love with sports as he got older. He grew to 65 and was a stand-out in Texas High School Basketball. Though he would get technical fouls for dancing on the court after a dunk during the game or for leading the crowd in song while at the free throw line, many knew he was different from other kids. Coffey attended college and in 2002 while on a basketball trip with the university decided he wanted to learn to play an instrument. Buying a beginner guitar book and borrowing a guitar from a friend, he started to play. After learning only a few chords, writing songs became an obsession. Coffey walked away from his first love, basketball, to focus on music. He then got the courage to test his talent with the best in the business and moved to Los Angeles. Without knowing anybody Coffey started crashing auditions, movie shoots, and singing in malls until security came. "If you don't believe in yourself, nobody else will." Coffey would win open mic nights around the city and won a talent contest that gave him free studio time. He made an 8 song demo and started street performing to sell it. Crowds would fill the street and the police would shut the concerts down. Coffey has since performed all around the country, doing over 100 dates in 7 months, and finished 3 albums. The albums include: Southern Man, Me and You, and The Inspiration Vol.1. Coffey is a firm prophet of DIY (do It Yourself) He uses his computer each week to make videos teaching his fans how to play his songs online, and making cool remixes of popular songs with freestyle raps and breakdowns of legendary stories. Youtube.com/CoffeySouthernMan and Godtube.com/CoffeySouthernMan Coffy is an natural leader and encourager. His talent has ranged from steet performing in Santa Monica, rodeos in Texas, and exclusive parties in the Hamptons. Coffy is an artist of the people. His music is almost as dynamic as his personality. Join and help get this artist out.
