Castalia believes that pagan culture needs musical expression, and is one of the many artists emerging on the international scene. Castalia is a multi-instrumentalist, composer and singer who tours America and Canada playing for pagans at festivals, shops, Unitarian events and even large living rooms. She began her formal music career in 1979, and discovered paganism at about the same time. The two passions eventually brought her to the recording studio to record a regular folk album and then Sacred Space. After an eight year hiatus, she re-released Sacred Space with more songs and a new title, and stepped up her concert schedule. Two years later, Hidden was born.
