Charmed Dangerous is a departure from her first, folksier album LookMaNoHands with its energetic rock/pop anthems. The songs are an eclectic mix of Pop, Rock, and Country with a hint of electro R&B snuck in there. It's a record sure to have 13-year-old girls pining over the life they've yet to experience and leave adults tapping their feet to it's contagious melodies. Marissa's witty lyrics and charming tunes are not to be missed. Teaming up with producers Mike Skinner (Kevin Devine, Scissor Sisters, Bloc Party, Diana Ross) and David Perlick Molinari (French Horn Rebellion) and mastering engineer Paul Geluso (Sufjan Stevens, The Animal Collective, Antony - of Antony and the Johnsons) has birthed a surprisingly aggressive record, complete with a full band. It shows significant growth, mixing extremely mature lyrics and themes and wide range of musical styles. Charmed Dangerous outlines the life of a New York wild child, living the charmed life in her early 20's having fun, raising hell and stumbling though the potentially dangerous consequences of those actions.
