Alto saxophone solo - improvisational music in a highly condensed mood - partly live. 13 MP3 Songs

JAZZ: Free Jazz, CLASSICAL: Contemporary Details: Since 1989 the solorezital on altosaxophone is a stronghold of Hermann Buhler's activities as a musician and composer. Buhler refers to the tradition of Jazz and improvised music as it is played by Steve Lacy, Antony Braxton or Evan Parker. In his solorezital Buhler combines improvisations and citations of his own compositions. As a material there can be found melodic features, multiphonics and minimalistic sounds that are made by circular breathing. There are emerging open and strong moods while Hermann Buhler starts to explore the sound features of the alto. The music contains breath-taking fireworks as well as removed blooming gardens. Jazz or not Jazz - that could be the question. You don't need an answer, being exposed to so much expressivity and beauty."

Neue Zürcher Zeitung 1995 In his recital Buhler played simple melodic forms that were treated in a sensitive and transparent way. Then he developed the melodies into polytonal patterns. Buhler's playing contains in the same time simplicity and virtuosity. This combination brings a cultivated, unpretentious air to a superb musical experience."

Schaffhauser Anzeiger 1995 Hermann Buhler Composer and saxophone player Hermann Buhler hails from Zurich. He is well known as an improviser, extending the expression of the saxophone to the limits. Hermann Buhler's works include compositions and sound installations ("Earth Bound"), compositions for sarod ("Sojourn") and for jazz combo ("Attractors").
