Details: Mark Sinnis is a New York City music scene veteran known for his "Cemetery Western" sound and thought-provoking lyrics. In March 2009, Sinnis released A Southern Tale, his second solo offering that reflects the darker side of life. With rich vocals that have been compared to a cross between Ian Curtis (Joy Division) and Johnny Cash, Sinnis music incorporates gothic undertones and hints of traditional country music with a contemporary edge. The title song pays homage to love and Elvis Presleys Graceland. Sinnis has managed to make the two classic cover tracks on the album, I Still Miss Someone by Johnny Cash and Follow Me, popularized by Blondie, entirely his own. This album also draws on musical history, with Sinnis singing To Feel Your Passion, Gones The Sorrow, inspired by Beethovens Pathetique, and A Christmas Song, which incorporates the traditional melody and lyrics of God Rest Ye Merry Gentleman" with Sinnis own lovelorn verse. Mark, whose music spans 2 decades, was the co-founder and singer/songwriter of the NYC band Apostates for 10 years from 1988-1998. In 1998, he started Ninth House and is the sole songwriter for the group. Into An Unhidden Future, Sinnis' debut solo album, was released in March 2008.
